i would like to thank @Killian for his support, he was a big help if i was you and i had this issue i would download another key from the website but not one that was updated over the last year or so and i would download a fresh key that hasn't been updated because when you have a key that has been updated and used many times, for example a website has been updated and many keys have been used from that website. this usually means that the key isn't compatible with new version of the game and you will be stuck downloading the same key over and over again so you should download a fresh key from the website and it will be compatible with the current version of the game Designed for children and their CDKEYCrackQ: JPA ManyToOne - cascade delete, lazy load I have an entity called ForeignKey: @Entity public class ForeignKey { @Id private Long id; private Long parentId; @ManyToOne @JoinColumn(name = "id", nullable = false) @Fetch(value = FetchMode.JOIN) private Project project; //getter & setter } Now when I delete a ForeignKey, is it expected that the parentProject will also get deleted? How can I turn the Fetch mode to eager?

I need to keep the Fetch mode as JOIN for the query below to work: Query query = em.createQuery("SELECT u FROM User u WHERE u.username = :username", User.class); A: OK, I figured out the answer.

To turn the Fetch mode to eager, I have to make it as: @ManyToOne(fetch = FetchType.EAGER) Now it works as expected. The invention relates to a storage bin for the removal of sheet material which has a cover and a base and is provided with a drive means by which the cover can be pivoted between two open positions and two closed positions and, when opened, can be lowered or raised to a certain extent, and which has a lever, which is connected to the base, which cooperates with a counter lever which is
