Field of the Invention This invention relates to a gelator and a polymer in solution (hereinafter referred to as “polymer solution”) using a gelator for an aqueous medium. The gelator includes a gelator having a dithiocarbamate structure. 2. Description of the Related Art For example, when a cationic or anionic polymerization reaction is applied to an organic solvent, a reaction can be conducted without using a solvent, and a polymerization product can be obtained as a dry solid. However, in the case of using water as a solvent, since water itself is very easily charged, the charge will be accumulated in the polymerization product. Accordingly, an aqueous medium which is not charged easily has been used. However, in this case, since a polymerization product as a dry solid is easily maintained, a problem occurs that the polymerization product is dried and maintained. Accordingly, the aqueous medium must be converted into a gel state so that a polymerization product is maintained. In order to do so, for example, a method of using a polymerizable monomer or a non-polymerizable monomer, a method of using a polymerization initiator, a method of using a cross-linking agent, a method of using a disulfide compound, a method of using a sulfoxide compound, a method of using a dithiocarbamate compound, a method of using a triorganophosphite compound, or the like have been proposed. However, a gelator having more excellent gel characteristics and a polymer in solution using a gelator have been demanded. A completely Open Source & Very effective e-Learning software for Tamil Nadu Government Schools Category:Education in Tamil Nadu Highly stereoselective, regioselective C-H bond alkylation of thiophenes and heteroarenes. This article describes the first highly regioselective, diastereoselective, and enantioselective C-H bond alkylation of thiophenes and heteroarenes with aryl diazonium salts. This reaction has been achieved using a stereospecific nickel catalyst with a cyclopentadienyl ligand, which is stable under the reaction conditions and gives the alkylated thiophene products in excellent yields and diastereoselectivities with up to 94% ee, and regioselectivities of up to >90:1. So this past week I went to an event in Seattle called "Seattle Art Quest" that was made in collaboration with Microsoft. They had a fun, interactive way to explore what Microsoft and the creative community are doing together. The event was a three day event where every day was a different theme, and that day was "Don't Forget Us" and they wanted to get young people excited about art. I got to go to an interview with Microsoft's Senior Director of Marketing. He spoke about how Microsoft has focused on how to get people excited about technology. He introduced a big focus on the "Smart Classroom" idea, and how Microsoft was not going to be stuck in a classroom, but how they wanted to be in every place that people go. He talked about how this included integrating technology into art and education. He spoke about a recent project in Oakland that allowed children to build sculptures with LEGO bricks. The children could choose to use a specific pattern of LEGO bricks that allowed them to connect their specific culture together. He also spoke about Microsoft's Live Lab, which explores how artists and technologists are coming together to make a beautiful future. It was a great event and a very interesting conversation. If you are in the Seattle area, you should check out more of their programs.
