It seems the DFS algorithm works well with a single graph, such as a web search or a neural network. However, if I'm given the option of a tree or graph, what is the correct algorithm for DFS? A: The key is that DFS recurses at least down one level in a tree. So you still need a mechanism for storing the current node and the edges you've walked. One way to do this is to have a data structure for representing trees and nodes that stores the parent pointers for all 2d92ce491b
