No matter if you are a digital camera user or a regular film user, photography is for everyone. The only technical barrier to truly capture that perfect image is the camera itself. DSLR cameras have been the preferred choice for general photography, but smartphones have been making inroads in to a market that never had many barriers to enter. But, it is not all roses for the smartphone and DSLR since there are many cases where the picture looks inferior due to various factors that one can only control. This is where smartphones do a better job than DSLRs in many cases. The photographic settings can be tweaked by the consumer to get the perfect image even if the camera has no manual setting to tell you. It is not all fun and games as both the smartphone and the DSLR have their drawbacks. The DSLR requires a good amount of knowledge and a steady hand to be used properly and to have the best results. Any photographer can edit a photo after the fact and get the image to look good, but many users simply prefer the spontaneity of being in the moment with a camera that 570a42141b
