Norway Norway, officially the Kingdom of Norway, is a Scandinavian country in Northern Europe. It is bordered by Sweden to the west, Finland to the north, Russia to the northeast, and the Baltic Sea to the east and south. The majority of Norway is mountainous, especially in the north, and is mostly covered by the Scandinavian Mountains and the Polar Plateau. The Rogen, Hardangervidda, and the Ural Mountains are world-renowned for their natural scenery. Norway has an extensive coastline, and is separated from Sweden by the Kattegat strait. Most of Norway's population lives in the southern half of the country. The highest elevation is Kvitfjell at the border with Sweden, at 2,270 metres (7,400 ft) above sea level. The history of Norway is complicated, encompassing ages from the Paleo-European Stone Age to modern Norway. The history of Norway, its people, and its culture is a subject of academic study. Climate Norway's climate is marked by its lengthy cold, short, and relatively mild summer. The average temperature in the country is $-2\text{ }^{\circ}\text{C}$ ($28\text{ }^{\circ}\text{F}$) in January, $10\text{ }^{\circ}\text{C}$ ($50\text{ }^{\circ}\text{F}$) in July. The temperature in the far north of Norway is almost as low as in the Arctic. Compared to the northernmost parts of Sweden, Norway has a drier climate and sunnier winters.[18] Lakes and rivers The largest lakes in Norway are the huge Lake Mjøsa in the north, Lake Sognefjorden in the north-west and south-west, Lake Tinnsjøen in the far north-east, Lake Tjøme and the much smaller Lake Løsje in the centre-east, and Lake Vestbygdsalvatnet in the far south. In the southern part of Norway are four lakes situated in the mountains of Sogn og Fjordane: Beitstadvatnet, Store
