4.1.2 - any IPSW Work for my iPhone 3G?

Jan 18, 2011 Where can I find the IPSW files for the iPhone 3G and iPhone 3GS? Is there a new online customizer. What does it mean? What I did, I flashed the 4.0 IPSW through redsn0w. But my phone still wouldn't work. So I saw a tutorial that said to get.ipsw (firmware) files. And so I did, and I couldn't download them on my desktop. Why would it need to be like that? A: This site has a pretty extensive list of.ipsw files for many iProducts, but unfortunately at the moment no lists are available for the 3G or 3GS. Amazon's climate-change documentary 'Years of Living Dangerously' is a force for good. A force for evil. To be fair, it was meant to be a force for good and if you saw it in a packed theater and remember the pain of what you were enduring while you watched it, you may feel the same way. In a theater with a fraction of the people, there was no way to prevent people from standing and being thrown around from the back of their seats. This isn't the movie theater -- it's a protest in progress. On the other hand, it was a painfully accurate depiction of what global climate change is already doing to people's lives and my own life in particular. Nothing I am about to say is new, but when I hear someone complaining about the "experiment" of climate change on their personal lives, I always have a ready response that's about a decade too late. Most of us aren't prepared for climate change. It's a big problem -- one that I don't think I'll ever fully understand, or even accept -- and the film basically told me that to be honest with myself, or anyone. From the very start, the documentary was very clear that the science is in the clear on this one. One thing I love about this film is that it gives science its due. Who needs Rick Nevin? The message here is that the climate's changing and if you're not prepared for it, you're stupid. (Well, that and everyone's already wearing a parka.) I love that it included a clip of my former colleague and hero, Dr. Jim Hansen of NASA warning us in 1988 that we had only 12 years to prevent the catastrophic "worst case" climate change
