The inclusion of this new FIFA gameplay feature is definitely an interesting one, one that will no doubt make the game more realistic than ever. Have a look below at the trailer and check out the official announcement! The technique, presented today at E3 2016, allows for players to experience the game in a more authentic way, meaning no set-ups or pre-generated gameplay. During development, FIFA’s technology group partnered with Imagineer, to collect over 10 hours of data on 22 professional footballers, who were present at the English Football League Champions’ League (1st stage) match between Manchester City and West Ham United. Combined with FIFA’s own biomechanics data, this allowed the technology team to understand player mechanics in motion, and continue to keep the data relevant to real-life conditions. FIFA will use this data to better engage the player with and understand the game. Proven by the brand’s exceptional match engine in FIFA 17, this technology has already proven to deliver enhanced gameplay which adds another level of authenticity to every on-pitch action. “Our goal is to push the limits of player immersion and create something unique that players have never experienced before,” said Peter Chubb, VP of Technology at EA. “When it comes to football games, FIFA is committed to making the next great football experience by giving players the most authentic and realistic football gameplay experience possible, so to use the technology we have built with Imagineer to create a next generation on-pitch motion capture engine, is a big moment for FIFA.” via: EA “We are very excited about having developed this technology, as it is part of our long-term strategy to enhance the game experience through our innovative technology and by continuing to push boundaries, innovate and deliver new, fresh and unique gameplay experiences,” says Sean Robins, Director of Technology at Imagineer. “Combining real-life, biomechanics, and new motion capture technology using the data collected from the 22 players we worked with has really given us the edge we needed.” In the world of FIFA, something as simple as running can get complicated, with movement and angles requiring a huge amount of calculation. The new HyperMotion technology will automatically match in-game movement data with real-life player performance to deliver a more realistic experience. For example, when you tackle a player, your virtual opponent will also need to make a movement

What's new in Fifa 22:

• New Players

Recent new signings include Riyad Mahrez, Kuba Blaszczykowski, Isco and Hernanes.

• Online Leagues

The revamped Online Leagues offer more fun and competition than ever in FIFA World Cup Leagues and World Club Leagues, and you can choose from several different leagues to join, as in previous versions of the game. The traditional FIFA Leagues are also available, for fans who like to play regularly against friends or the top Pro Teams.

• Player Ratings

New player ratings give more weight to the defensive side of the game. The new player ratings and pre-match predictions are based on robust community testing data, which are unaffected by player performance in the real world.

• Defending

Simplified defensive rules, including drills to help defenders maintain position and disrupt play better, make your defence more proactive and predictable. You no longer need to select specific player roles when defending. Whether it’s marking by a defender or defending a specific zone, the system keeps you on your toes.

• Ball Control

New “Connection Control” system will reward players who make smart, quick decisions and take optimal actions with the ball. The connection and timing of your passes and dribbles will help you dictate the pace of the game - making both offensive and defensive play better.

• Ball Physics

FIFA World Cup and World Cup Qualifiers and the UEFA Euro 2016 Tournament brought many new features that improve player ball physics.

• Control Transfer

In FIFA World Cup 24, you will have more control over when to send promising players out on loan to gain experience at top regional clubs. Now you can loan up to eight players a year when their performance warrants it. You can now construct your own squad and develop your own player pool. Just like in real life, players will not always perform to their best, and you will not always get the player you want - but by making decisions on occasion, you can avoid the disastrous late transfer market fees.
