

“We do not want to create the ‘run n’ gun’ style of gameplay, but we want to make it easier for players to make their runs and passes when their team is pressing,” said Peter Rist. “Most of all, we want to add more intelligence and flair into the gameplay. We want to create a lively, open-play experience that attracts and inspires players and fans around the world.” “With the help of our various teams and global stakeholders, we’ve been thinking about the key features that players want, and developing prototypes that take the best of each concept into the final game,” said Oliver Schmitz. “The core gameplay will not be linear, or distinct of FIFA 17. We want our users to have a fully interactive and fun experience that makes sports seem more like an interactive entertainment experience.” “FIFA has the most content of any sports game in the world, but the overall experience lacks finesse and subtlety,” said Eddy Barua. “We want to bring those qualities into the game, but there are some features that, simply, we have never been able to achieve in the past. It’s much simpler to hit a ball with an exo-skeleton than it is to move your character in real time with real physics. So this year, we are going to challenge ourselves, by creating the best game we can.” FIFA 20 saw a number of headline additions, like the return of the Fouls and Free Kicks mechanic in association with the FIFASL and review system, the introduction of the pass completion meter, individual attributes for all 11 global team captains, and a revolutionary new real-time tackling system. FIFA 20 saw four game modes with a refined league and cup system, an expanded MyClub mode, and a new Time-Based Seasons gameplay experience, which began with the Carabao Cup and runs until the start of the 2018/19 season. The accompanying game AI had its biggest overhaul since FIFA 10, letting all players on the pitch follow the ball in a way never seen before in the franchise. In addition, FIFA 20 introduced a brand-new Pitch technology that created more believable grass patterns and grass physics. FIFA 20’s improved ball physics, pitch features, and AI goalkeeping saw more aggressive and skilled players across all the game modes.

What's new:

- EA has implemented a brand new handling model for the first touch system. Now a player will have slight adjustments at the tackle of an opponent, another impact with the ball during a counter-attack or a dribble attack, and a last impact with his/her foot on a through ball. The perception of the player's last touch now make him dribble toward his opponent and it will now actually lead him correctly. More control of the dribbling player is also included, making a small impact on the surrounding players during a dribble run.
- FIFA has changed its web accessibility guidelines and the implementation. As a result, the game can now be played on any web browser that supports CSS3, but also any Windows or Mac operating system that runs Internet Explorer 9 or newer (tested with IE 11 and 12)
- Engine performance improvements for Specific hardware configurations. Additional generalisation improvements for gamepad compatibility.
- A set of improvements has been made to the interaction between the players and the ball. Players are now better at dribbling in tight spaces and around other players, and the behavior of players when they take control of the ball has been improved.
- Goalkeepers new body awareness when about to throw or when quickly picking up the ball. When you take a shot, goalkeepers now react better to different events and actions.
- Loft passes and balance improvements on complex patterns. Batting improvements on fast balls towards the keeper.
- Lasers. A new infrastructure for high-speed players traveling.
- A new vibrant Club atmosphere. New dreams for young footballers and fans to inspire them to find their own path in the game.
- New dynamic animations for defenders catching the ball and interceptions. A new defense ready for headers and short balls. New challenges against physical players.
- Referees are included for more intelligence and control.
- Nine Country Kits updated.
